A Life of Faith and Service

Mrs. Harriet Newell, the beloved wife of Reverend Samuel Newell, was a woman of extraordinary faith and devotion. Born in Haverhill, Massachusetts, in 1793, she grew up in a pious household where she developed a deep love for God and a desire to serve her community.

In 1812, Harriet married Reverend Newell, a young minister who had recently been ordained as a missionary to India. Together, they embarked on a perilous journey to the distant land, filled with hope and a burning desire to share the gospel with those who had never heard it before.

Trials and Tribulations

The Newells' mission to India was fraught with challenges. They faced cultural barriers, language difficulties, and harsh living conditions. Harriet endured many hardships, including the loss of her husband to tropical fever in 1821. Yet, through it all, her faith remained unwavering.

Despite her personal grief, Harriet continued to serve the people of India. She worked tirelessly to establish schools for girls, orphanages, and hospitals. She also played a pivotal role in translating the Bible into the local languages.

A Lasting Legacy

Harriet Newell's life and work left an enduring legacy in India. The institutions she helped establish continue to serve the community to this day. Her unwavering faith and sacrificial spirit inspired countless others to dedicate their lives to missionary work.

In 1826, Harriet returned to the United States, where she continued to advocate for the cause of missions. She spoke at churches and gatherings, sharing her experiences and encouraging others to join the effort to spread the gospel.

Honoring Her Memory

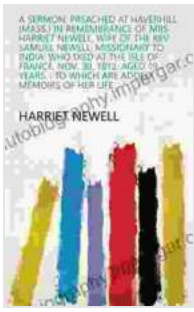

In 1834, a memorial service was held in Haverhill, Massachusetts, in remembrance of Harriet Newell. The sermon preached on that occasion was a moving tribute to her life and service.

The sermon, which has been preserved and published, offers a glimpse into the character of this remarkable woman. It highlights her deep faith, her unwavering commitment to serving others, and her enduring legacy as a pioneer in missionary work.

The story of Harriet Newell is a testament to the power of faith, the importance of service, and the enduring impact that one life can have on the world.
